The Launch Pad Randall Stross,2013-09-24 A behind-the-scenes look at how tomorrow's hottest startups are being primed for greatness Investment firm Y Combinator is the most sought-after home for startups in Silicon Valley. Twice a year, it funds dozens of just-founded startups and provides three months of guidance from Paul Graham, YC's impresario, and his partners. Receiving an offer from YC creates the opportunity of a lifetime. Acclaimed journalist Randall Stross was granted unprecedented access to Y Combinator, enabling a unique inside tour of the world of software startups. Over the course of a summer, we watch as a group of founders scramble to make something people want. This is the definitive story of a seismic shift in the business world, in which coding skill trumps experience, undergraduates confidently take on Goliaths, and investors fall in love.

To Bed at Noon Ian Richards,1997-01-01 This volume examines the life and work of New Zealand author Maurice Duggan. His life was turbulent and difficult as he suffered from a black Irish personality, the lifelong trauma of an amputated leg, and battles with alcoholism, relationships and employment. This biography looks at the complexity of his life and offers a picture of literary life in New Zealand, and especially Auckland, in the 1950's and 1960's.

The Hired Lad Ian Campbell Thomson,2015-03-19 Ian Campbell Thomson relives his time as a young farmworker on a Stirlingshire farm after the Second World War. It is a touching coming-of-age tale as the author makes new friends and experiences romance while finding his own way in an ever-changing world with the passing of age-old country ways, as technology begins to replace traditional farming methods. The book is dedicated to Donald and Blossom, the magnificent pair of Clydesdale horses with which he ploughed, until the sad day when they were replaced by a smart Fordson tractor. Of those early times he writes: 'I often wondered how far I walked in a day behind the plough. My guess was somewhere between 12 and 15 miles ... the words the ploughman homeward wends his weary way just about sums up the end of the day trudge back to the farm, with darkness closing in and the stable work to be done.' Peopled with memorable characters including the hard-working 'boss', and the wise Aunt Kit, this is a unique tribute, full of humour and nostalgia, to a disappearing culture.

Last Train to Palookaville Ian Lovegrove,2014-10-25 This is the story of one man's struggle to make good in the hash environment of post World War II Britain, a country in long-term decline. It depicts the experiences, adventures and misadventures of a working class male. The treatment is earthy and candid and laced with humour in its description of the twin impostors of triumphs and disasters in personal and professional life. His artistic development is described in some detail with reference to works on his website, palimpsestart.com. A substantial part of the book is dedicated to a serious critique of contemporary life in Britain.

Ian Trevelyan Dermot O'Hanlon,2013 Owen Trevelyan has almost everything an English squire could hope for - a large and comfortable house, a well-ordered estate, a handsome sensible wife, and the respect and gratitude of the local people. The one thing he yearns for, however, is a son, so when an impoverished distant cousin comes to live at Trevelyan House with her son, he wonders whether the boy, Ian Trevelyan, will be a worthy candidate for his untried paternal affections.

The Writings of Ian Hay: A knight on wheels Ian Hay,1921

Ian Trevelyan Dermot O'Hanlon,2017-04-14 IAN Trevelyan, a young boy who is the result of a disastrous marriage, a marriage opposed by his mother's wealthy relatives who have rejected her because of it, is eventually invited back to Trevelyan House with her because of their change of mind. A secondary motive for this change of mind is that their relatives, Owen and Helen Trevelyan, whose first child died, now have a girl, and Owen hopes that Ian will live up to his expectations to be the son he never had. However, in this he is very disappointed, Ian being a very plain-looking, introspective, lonely boy, and unable to make friends, because of his early traumatic background and because his mother is on the verge of a mental breakdown as a result of the poor marriage.and her husband's desertion. How the events work themselves out is the theme of the novel, and the following extracts will give a flavour of the writing and of the period to which it refers, about the middle of the last century when society was changing:'Ian, at eleven, was not an unhappy boy, but he was a very lonely one. He could never make friends easily, and even when he did, his shy and reserved manner, generally mistaken for either aloofness or superiority, usually prevented him from keeping them for long. And the dreary succession of broken friendships made him withdraw more and more into himself and set up a vicious circle, making him even more shy and reserved. . .''It must not be thought from what has been said that Ellen's reception had been a cool one, or that either Owen or his wife had adopted a reproachful, accusing, or triumphant attitude towards her at any time during their two brief talks with her. Owen might have treated her in a different way had she been any other person but herself; but in his eyes, she was too pathetic and insignificant a creature ever to call for even an indication of his unforgiving nature.. . .''And far from being answers tailored just to please his mother, what he had told her was quite true. Since coming to his new home, he had experienced more happiness than he had ever done in any other comparable period of his life before. Quite apart from the material conditions of his new life, which bore no comparison to what he had been used to, he had the comfort of having other people besides his mother interested in him. He was even beginning to find that Mr.Trevelyan's well-meant, but awkward and somewhat embarrassing solicitude was meeting a need of which he had only been but dimly conscious of before. . .''Realizing that he had't cut as good a figure as he could have wished, Owen tried to make up for lost ground in one daring, foolhardy and completely asinine act, by setting his mount at a particularly high fence just about within sight of the village. The hunter, conscious his own abilities, showed no inclination of either chancing the fence or boldly attacking it, but stopped abruptly at the crucial moment, and Owen took off like a flamingo in the dying rays of a sun. . .'' 'But even when it was pretty obvious that there was something wrong with Ellen, it was some time before anyone suspected just how serious that something was. Owen,as we have seen, responded to the situation by calling in the vicar, a good, wise and kindly man, to work some miracle on the poor, disintegrating human material that was Ellen. . .''The extinguishing of the light in Philip's room seemed to extinguish, at the same time, all the high hopes which he had recently entertained because of the other's changing attitude towards him. Unable to hold back any longer the tears which had been so near to coming since he had spoken to Peggy last, he rested his head wearily on his arms and cried himself to sleep. . .'

The Mouse Triptych Ian Thomson,2013-05-15 The Mouse Triptych is a trilogy of stories where mice, in one way or another, tangle with humans. In A Stroke of Genius, a mastermind among mice, seeking refuge from a bitter winter, finds his way into a big Victorian house. Its once-grand rooms are now occupied by a shabby old scholar who has a pathological fear of mice. Man and mouse engage in a life and death struggle until, at a stroke, the odds are reversed. Polemikos is the dark story of a mouse born inside the Trojan Horse. He believes his mission is to save Troy from her doom and from the vulgar Greeks. His short life inside the stinking belly of the horse moves to a devastating climax as he follows the psychopath, Pyrrhus, in his murderous path through the blazing city. The reader is left to decide whether little Polemikos changes the course of history or not. The third tale, The Downing Street Cat, is lighter in tone, though it contains playful satire. It is set inside Number 10 Downing Street, the seat of the UK Government, where the Cabinet (of mice, of course) is deliberating about how to get rid of the Cat. The Minister for Nocturnal Affairs has a remarkably devious plan. The stories are held together by the low esteem in which mice hold men and there is a comic vein which runs through them even at the darkest moments. Each can be read separately, but in fact, they are subtly hinged by the idea that humans have less control of their destinies than they might suppose.
