Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report ,2007

Chemokine Protocols Amanda E.I. Proudfoot,Timothy N.C. Wells,Christine Power,2010-11-10 The chemokines family of small proteins are involved in numerous biological processes ranging from hematopoiesis, angiogenesis, and basal leukocyte trafficking to the extravasation and tissue infiltration of leukocytes in response to inflammatory agents, tissue damage, and bacterial or viral infection. Chemokines exert their effects through a family of seven G-protein coupled transmembrane receptors. Worldwide interest in the chemokine field surged dramatically early in 1996, with the finding that certain chemokine receptors were the elusive coreceptors, required along with CD4, for HIV infection. Today, though over 40 human chemokines have been described, the number of chemokine receptors lags behind—only 17 human chemokine receptors have been identified so far. What has emerged over the years is that most chemokine receptors bind several distinct ligands, and indeed the majority of chemokines are able to bind to multiple chemokine receptors, explaining to some extent the apparent disparity in the numbers of chemokines and receptors. Yet in spite of the apparent redundancy in chemokine/chemokine receptor interactions, it is clear that in vivo, spatial, temporal, and indeed cell- and tissue-specific expression of both chemokines and their receptors are important factors in determining the precise nature of cellular infiltrates in physiological and pathological processes.

Complement Methods and Protocols B. Paul Morgan,2000-03-30 The complement system, first described more than a century ago, was for many years the ugly duckling of the immunology world, but no more. Complement in recent years has blossomed into a fascinating and fast moving field of immediate relevance to clinical scientists in fields as diverse as transplantation biology, virology, and inflammation. Despite its emergence from the shadows, complement retains an unwarranted reputation for being “difficult.” This impression derives in large part from the superficially complicated nomenclature, a relic of the long and tortuous process of unraveling the system, of naming components in order of discovery rather than in a systematic manner. Once the barrier of nomenclature has been surmounted, then the true simplicity of the system becomes apparent. Complement comprises an activation system and a cytolytic system. The former has diverged to focus on complement to distinct targets—bacteria, immune complexes, and others—so that texts now describe three activation pathways, closely related to one another, but each with some unique features. The cytolytic pathway is the same regardless of the activation process and kills cells by creating pores in the membrane. Complement plays an important role in killing bacteria and is essential for the proper handling of immune complexes. Problems occur when complement is activated in an inappropriate manner—the potent inflammation-inducing products of the cascade then cause unwanted tissue damage and destruction.

Manufacturing Engineering and Process Xiaoxiao Zhou,2012-04-25 These are the proceedings of the International Conference on Manufacturing Engineering and Processing (ICMEP 2012), held on the 21st and 22nd April, 2012, in Kunming, China. The objective of ICMEP 2012 was to provide a forum for the discussion of new developments, recent progress and innovations in Manufacturing Engineering and Processing. These proceedings address all aspects of design methods, with the emphasis placed on current and future challenges in research and developments in academia and industry.

Advanced Techniques for Surface Engineering W. Gissler,H.A. Jahn,1992-10-31 The hardest requirements on a material are in general imposed at the surface: it has to be wear resistant for tools and bearings; corrosion resistant for turbine blades; antireflecting for solar cells; and it must combine several of these properties in other applications. 'Surface engineering' is the general term that incorporates all the techniques by which a surface modification can be accomplished. These techniques include both the more traditional methods, such as nitriding, boriding and carburizing, and the newer ones, such as ion implantation, laser beam melting and, in particular, coating. This book comprises and compares in a unique way all these techniques of surface engineering. It is a compilation of lectures which were held by renowned scientists and engineers in the frame of the well known 'EuroCourses' of the Joint Research Centre of the Commission of the European Communities. The book is principally addressed to material and surface scientists, physicists and chemists, engineers and technicians of industries and institutes where surface engineering problems arise.
