Access Denied Ronald Deibert, John Palfrey, Rafal Rohozinski, Jonathan Zittrain, 2008-01-25 A study of Internet blocking and filtering around the world: analyses by leading researchers and survey results that document filtering practices in dozens of countries. Many countries around the world block or filter Internet content, denying access to information that they deem too sensitive for ordinary citizens—most often about politics, but sometimes relating to sexuality, culture, or religion. Access Denied documents and analyzes Internet filtering practices in more than three dozen countries, offering the first rigorously conducted study of an accelerating trend. Internet filtering takes place in more than three dozen states worldwide, including many countries in Asia, the Middle East, and North Africa. Related Internet content-control mechanisms are also in place in Canada, the United States and a cluster of countries in Europe. Drawing on a just-completed survey of global Internet filtering undertaken by the OpenNet Initiative (a collaboration of the Berkman Center for Internet and Society at Harvard Law School, the Citizen Lab at the University of Toronto, the Oxford Internet Institute at Oxford University, and the University of Cambridge) and relying on work by regional experts and an extensive network of researchers, Access Denied examines the political, legal, social, and cultural contexts of Internet filtering in these states from a variety of perspectives. Chapters discuss the mechanisms and politics of Internet filtering, the strengths and limitations of the technology that powers it, the relevance of international law, ethical considerations for corporations that supply states with the tools for blocking and filtering, and the implications of Internet filtering for activist communities that increasingly rely on Internet technologies for communicating their missions. Reports on Internet content regulation in forty different countries follow, with each two-page country profile outlining the types of content blocked by category and documenting key findings. Contributors Ross Anderson, Malcolm Birdling, Ronald Deibert, Robert Faris, Vesselina Haralampieva [as per Rob Faris], Steven Murdoch, Helmi Noman, John Palfrey, Rafal Rohozinski, Mary Rundle, Nart Villeneuve, Stephanie Wang, Jonathan Zittrain

Access Delayed, Access Denied: Waiting for New Medicines in Canada Brett James Skinner, 2011

Access Delayed, Access Denied, 2008 PR: the date at which the first public reimbursement of the new drug is recorded in the formularies of each federal, provincial, and territorial drug program. [...] For the purposes of this report, the global development time for new medicines is assumed to be a function of factors outside of Canada's control; therefore, the time associated with this segment is presented for completeness but is not the focus of the main policy discussion in this paper, nor is it part of the overall wait time for access to new medicines measured here. [...] In Canada, the time patients spend waiting for government approval of a new drug is measured from the date the drug manufacturer's application for approval is recorded or filed in the Central Registry (CR) of Health Canada's Therapeutic Products Directorate (TPD) or Biologics and Genetics Therapies Directorate (BGTD) following the completion of clinical testing. [...] Since 2004, the equivalent authority to approve pharmaceutical and biological medicines in the United States has fallen under the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), with the Center for Drug Evaluation and Research (CDER), a part of the Food and Drugs Administration (FDA). [...] The delay in this segment is measured from the date at which Health Canada issues a NOC for a new drug to the date at which the first public reimbursement (PR) of the same drug is recorded in the formularies of each federal, provincial, and territorial drug program.

The authors here take a few steps back from the hype and consider the real place of these new technologies in society.

Access Denied ,2001 Much of the current public discussion in the United States about the Internet and speech rights focuses on the array of materials (particularly sexually explicit materials) that are available on the Internet, the effect of exposure to them on youth development, and whether the material should be regulated. In exploring questions about youth access to materials on the Internet, students learn that the general objective of law is to balance the interests of the state with the interests of the individual in the interest of some greater public good. They also learn how the law seeks to protect minors, regulates indecent speech, and has historically treated indecent and obscene speech. This resource guide offers an overview of the way the law has reviewed two classes of speech most relevant to the contemporary discussion of Internet obscenity and decency. The guide is divided into: (1) How To Use This Resource Guide (Learning Objectives; Organization of Guide); (2) Permissible and Impermissible Speech (First Amendment; Law and Cultural Concerns); (3) New Media and Youth (Media Impact on Youth; Internet Filtering; Comics and Movies); (4) Indecent and Obscene Speech (Nineteenth-Century Law; Comstock Law; Hicklin Standard; Early Twentieth-Century Law); (5) U.S. Supreme Court (Roth: First Contemporary Obscenity Tests; Contradictory Decisions; Pornography); (6) Internet Speech (Communications Decency Act of 1996; District Court Decision; U.S. Supreme Court Decision); and (7) Child Online Protection Act of 1998 (Circuit Court Decision; Future for COPA). Chapters include notes. Attached are a timeline of relevant Supreme Court cases; online lessons, strategies, and teaching activities; lists of additional resources; and terms and vocabulary. (BT)
