Provide free markets just outcomes? Simon Kehrer, 2008-09-02 Seminar paper from the year 2007 in the subject Business economics - Economic Policy, grade: 1,3, Stellenbosch University (University of Stellenbosch (South Africa)), course: Modern Economic Systems and Global Capitalism, 15 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: Not only in economics people often talk about markets in fairly different circumstances. What does that mean? The Britannica Online Encyclopedia serves us with the following definition: "A market is a means by which the exchange of goods and services takes place as a result of buyers and sellers being in contact with one another, either directly or through mediating agents or institutions."1 What they call 'means' could also be named as a social arrangement. Analogously to the physical location of a street market every other form of market is a man-made institution in order to organize trade. Thereby it is in addition to the right of own property probably the most salient feature of every capitalist system. But as long as markets are not natural but social constructs, they and the way they are shaped have to be subjects of human monitoring. Although this seems self-evident from an impartial point of view, free markets and their results are often taken for granted by some economists. This article focuses on the results of markets, the so-called market outcomes. More precisely it is about the justice of market outcomes with special attention to the ideology and thought of Neo-liberalism with respect to this subject. During this article I will continue along the following structure: First I will expose the possibility of market failures and distinguish these failures into traditional market failures and another form of undesirable market outcomes, the failures-of-market outcomes. After that, we will devote attention to the upswing of the New Right and its ideological background. After focusing on two extremely influential thinkers – Friedrich von Hayek and Robert Nozick – we will examine the justice of free markets. I will finally end up with a conclusion in which I resume the most important results and give an overview about the implications. [...]

Strategic Marketing Guenther Klein, 2007-04-17 Seminar paper from the year 2007 in the subject Business economics - Marketing, Corporate Communication, CRM, Market Research, Social Media, grade: none, University of Leicester, 25 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: I. Introduction - Competing for the future Today organizations have to find answers to questions that might be asked in near future by both: customers and competitors. In his book "On Marketing" by Kotler written in 1999, the author is drawing a dramatic picture of the future, for the competitive situation in 2005: "Companies are unable to sustain competitive advantages (outside of patents...)" . Although his scenario maybe came not true, the point is interesting: How do companies find the right way to respond to new developments (e-business, globalization etc.). Strategy is about the long term development. Organizations need to collect information of the market, they have to define strategies and difficult enough, they need to implement the strategies. In order to remain a market leader, Hamel and Prahalad advise their reader in an article from 1994 to pause for a moment and ask questions like: -Who are the customers today and who will be the customers in the future? -Who are presently our competitors and who will compete with us in the future? -What is our competitive advantage today and what will make us a leader in the future? Models like Ansoff's matrix or Porter's 5 Forces make today's situation visible and allow to formulate strategic options. The task is to find and implement strategic options, that allow the best allocation of resources in the future.

Market Audit and Analysis Nicole Lorat, 2009-10 Seminar paper from the year 2005 in the subject Business economics - Marketing, Corporate Communication, CRM, Market Research, Social Media, grade: B (Credit), 0 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: This report uses an anonymous company which is looking at the process of conducting a complex marketing audit to provide information for corporate planning, identifying external factors influencing its commercial performance and ensuring the use of effective strategies to promote its products, markets and distribution channels in a complex and diversified market place. This report is to help the organisation evaluate the most appropriate analysis tools. It therefore looks at the micro and macro environment, the role of marketing information and research, critical assessments of analytical tools such as PESTEL, Porter's five force analysis, SWOT analysis and Boston Matrix.

Investment Strategies in Emerging Markets Saul Estrin, Klaus Meyer, 2004-01-01 The book investigates foreign direct investment (FDI) strategies in four important emerging economies: Egypt, India, South Africa and Vietnam. These countries liberalized their economies in the 1990s with the intention of attracting greater FDI inflows. This book assesses whether they have been successful in achieving this goal. The authors adopt a comparative perspective and use a large enterprise survey plus three individual case studies in each country. They investigate the strategies of foreign direct investors focusing on the relationship between the investment climate, the mode of entry (acquisition, greenfield or joint venture), company performance, and spillovers to the host economy. The book outlines how the interactions between international businesses and the local policy environment influence the entry strategies of firms. Academics and researchers with an interest in international business, emerging markets, economic development and strategic management will find this book informative and insightful.--BOOK JACKET.

Trade Promotion Strategies Claude Cellich,2012-01-13 New opportunities are emerging constantly, as part of the globalization process creating new markets, with new players and challenging current business practices. Creating or exploiting opportunities on an individual basis is not the best practice: it is much more productive (and much less risky) to participate in national Trade Promotion Programs designed and implemented with government assistance. In recent years, Trade Promotion Institutions have developed national strategies and new tools to support the business sector, helping enterprises to find new markets and trade opportunities. What are these national strategies, how are they designed and implemented? Special attention is given to evaluation tools created to assess results and provide justification for investment expenditures. Best practices will be considered and reviewed on the basis of selected countries having introduced innovative national trade promotion programs, such as Finland, Mauritius, Mexico, New Zealand and Singapore.

What We Owe Each Other Minouche Shafik,2021-04-27 From one of the leading policy experts of our time, an urgent rethinking of how we can better support each other to thrive Whether we realize it or not, all of us participate in the social contract every day through mutual obligations among our family, community, place of work, and fellow citizens. Caring for others, paying taxes, and benefiting from public services define the social contract that supports and binds us together as a society. Today, however, our social contract has been broken by changing gender roles, technology, new models of work, aging, and the perils of climate change. Minouche Shafik takes us through stages of life we all experience—raising children, getting educated, falling ill, working, growing old—and shows how a reordering of our societies is possible. Drawing on evidence and examples from around the world, she shows how every country can provide citizens with the basics to have a decent life and be able to contribute to society. But we owe each other more than this. A more generous and inclusive society would also share more risks collectively and ask everyone to contribute for as long as they can so that everyone can fulfill their potential. What We Owe Each Other identifies the key elements of a better social contract that recognizes our interdependencies, supports and invests more in each other, and expects more of individuals in return. Powerful, hopeful, and thought-provoking, What We Owe Each Other provides practical solutions to current challenges and demonstrates how we can build a better society—together.

Natural Resource Management and the Circular Economy Robert C.

Brears, 2018-02-15 This book provides insight into how governments are using a variety of innovative fiscal and non-fiscal instruments to develop circular economies with significant economic and environmental benefits. It emphasises the urgent need for these circular economies and to move away from our current, linear model that has led to environmental degradation, volatility of resource prices and supply risks from uneven distribution of natural resources. Natural Resource Management and the Circular Economy illustrates how governments have promoted the development of an economy that can provide substantial net material savings; mitigate price volatility and supply risks; and improve ecosystem health and long-term resilience of the economy. Through a series of case studies, it details the various innovative policy instruments which can be utilised, including regulations; market-based instruments; incentives; research and innovation support; information exchanges; and support for voluntary approaches. The book also proposes a series of best practices for different countries, both developed and developing, who are implementing their circular economy.

Market Entry Strategies Viktor Tielmann, 2010-07-29 Research Paper (undergraduate) from the year 2010 in the subject Business economics - Offline Marketing and Online Marketing, grade: 1,0, University of Applied Sciences Fulda, course: International Marketing Management, language: English, abstract: Globalization has increased the competition amongst firms. There are more and more companies which are motivated to conquer foreign markets and enlarge their presence on these markets. For multiple reasons, companies adopt modes to enter foreign markets and find new channels of distribution. Choosing the right and appropriate market entry strategy has a growing importance. As a matter of fact, companies should align their strategy to their objectives and adapt them to the foreign markets environment. There are numerous different entry strategies which are all linked to different entry modes, different amounts of risks or costs. From the least costly mode to the most expensive one we distinguish three main strategies: Export is characterized by the transportation of finished goods from one country to another. The distribution on site is done by an intermediary or by foreign based distributors or agents. Joint Venturing includes different characteristics of various joint contracts with firms to produce or promote services or products. Direct investment is, when a company decides to invest directly into a foreign country by either establish an assembly operation, a wholly-owned operation as well as a merge or an acquisition. Each of the market entry strategy has both, advantages and disadvantages. The less costly the strategy is, the less control the company has over the distribution channel. Consequently, the company depends more or less on foreign institutions or foreign partners. All in all a company has to figure out for itself which strategy to choose, according to its particular situation, financial as well as economical and environmental. Therefore, before entering a market, a previous comprehensive research and analysis of the target market and its economic environment is indispensable to achieve a successful launch into an unknown market.
